How to automatically post to Facebook from your blog

Sharing your blog on your Facebook profile, a Facebook page or Facebook groups is a great way to promote your blog posts and drive more traffic to your blog or website. When you connect your blog to Facebook for auto-posting, each time you publish a new post, your post will automatically be shared on your Facebook pages and in your groups. Furthermore, it will be automatically moved to the Instant Sharing tab so you can use Facebook Instant Sharing to share your blog post on your Facebook profile or in events. Every follower on Facebook will automatically see your post on their Facebook status updates page where they can click on it and visit your blog to read the rest of the post (and if your Facebook profile is public, everyone with Internet access can see it).

There are different ways to automatically post to Facebook profiles, Facebook pages or Facebook groups and there are several things to consider, before you automatically post to Facebook and share your blog posts on Facebook or to multiples pages and groups, to get the most visibility and outreach from your communities.

The main difference between link and photo posts is what happens when your followers, fans or friends click on the respective post.

A link pasted into your status update will be displayed with an automatic link preview. This post format automatically extracts the featured image, the title and the first two sentences of your blog post from the meta or open graph information on your website. With a click on the link preview or the displayed image, users will be directly forwarded to your blog post.

When auto posting a photo post to Facebook, your followers, fans or friends will be able to view the image, info graphic or photo in a preview on their news feed. By adding a link to your blog post in the comment they will also be able to visit your website. The main advantage of this post format is that users will permanently be able to view the shared image and visit your blog post, as the photo will be saved in your Facebook albums.

How often to share your blog posts and automatically post to Facebook

Whenever you post to Facebook, only a fraction of your potential target audience will actually see your post. So it might be wise to post to Facebook more than once. But, while it is OK to post as many as 3 times per day on Twitter, to do the same thing on Facebook could become pretty annoying and will probably result in losing followers.

Autoposting, Sharing und Re-Sharing

- Best posting frequency for Facebook is 2 posts per day
- Engagement decreases dramatically after the second post
- The best time to post to Facebook is in the afternoon from 1 p.m. – 4 p.m. and in the evening from 6 p.m. – 10 p.m.
- Post to Facebook on weekends as well

Furthermore, you should consider the specific audience of your Facebook pages, profile or groups when you automatically post to Facebook from your blog. To conquer the top ranks on your followers news feeds, it's most important to post the right content, in the right format, at the right time.
