Scheduling and Best Time Manager

How can I set my own best times for social media?

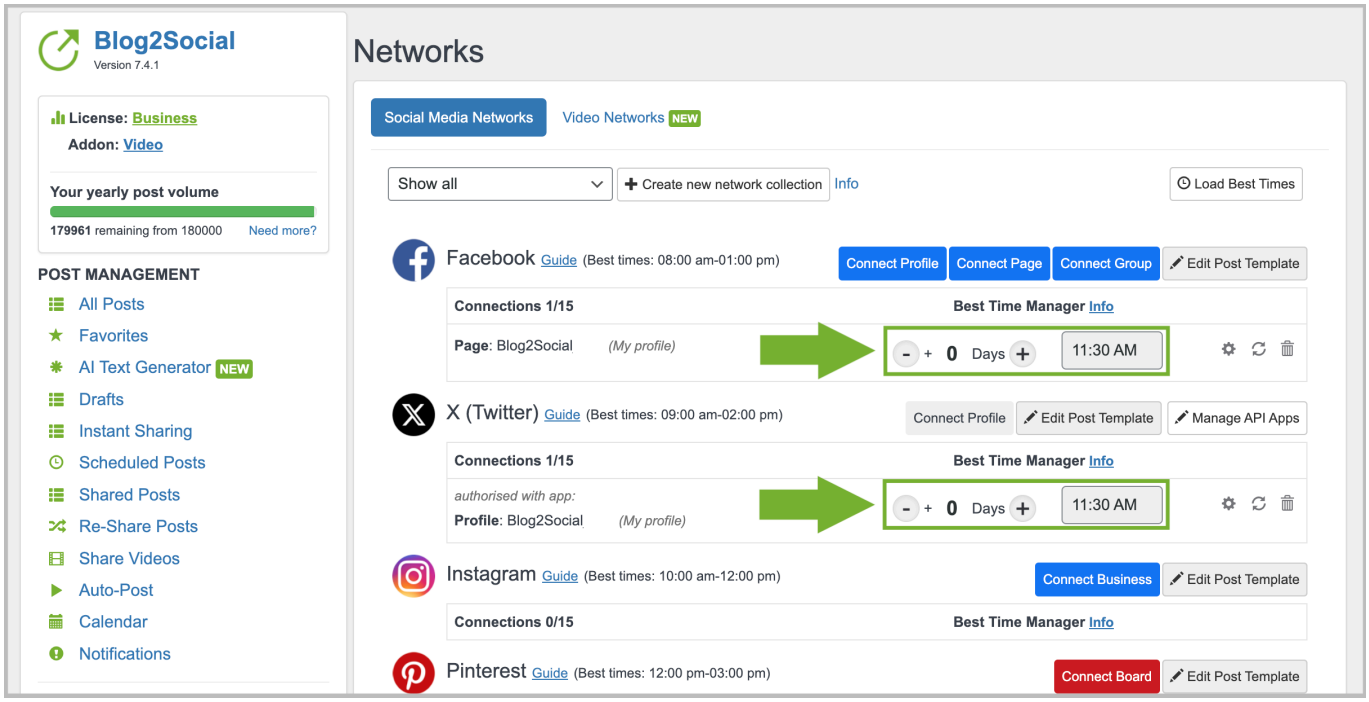
If you want to boost engagement and get more eyes on your social media posts, timing can be just as crucial as the message itself.

With Blog2Social's Best-Time Manager, you can use preset "best times" to automatically publish your posts at the ideal moments. To ensure your content goes live exactly when your target audience and followers are actually online, you can customize these slots and define your own personal schedule for every single social media connection.

How to set up your custom best times

To customize your individual best times, click on "Networks" in Blog2Social.

You can tailor the scheduling for each of your social media connections individually. Set your preferred times and, if needed, define a delay in days. This makes it easy to automatically spread your content across your community over several days or weeks.



Your changes are saved automatically and can be updated at any time. Once set, your custom best times can be applied to all future posts for that specific social media account.

How to use your Best Times for social media posts

In Blog2Social, select "Share Posts" and click "Share on Social Media" next to the post you want to share. To apply your individual time settings to this specific post, simply click "Load My Time Settings" in the preview editor.

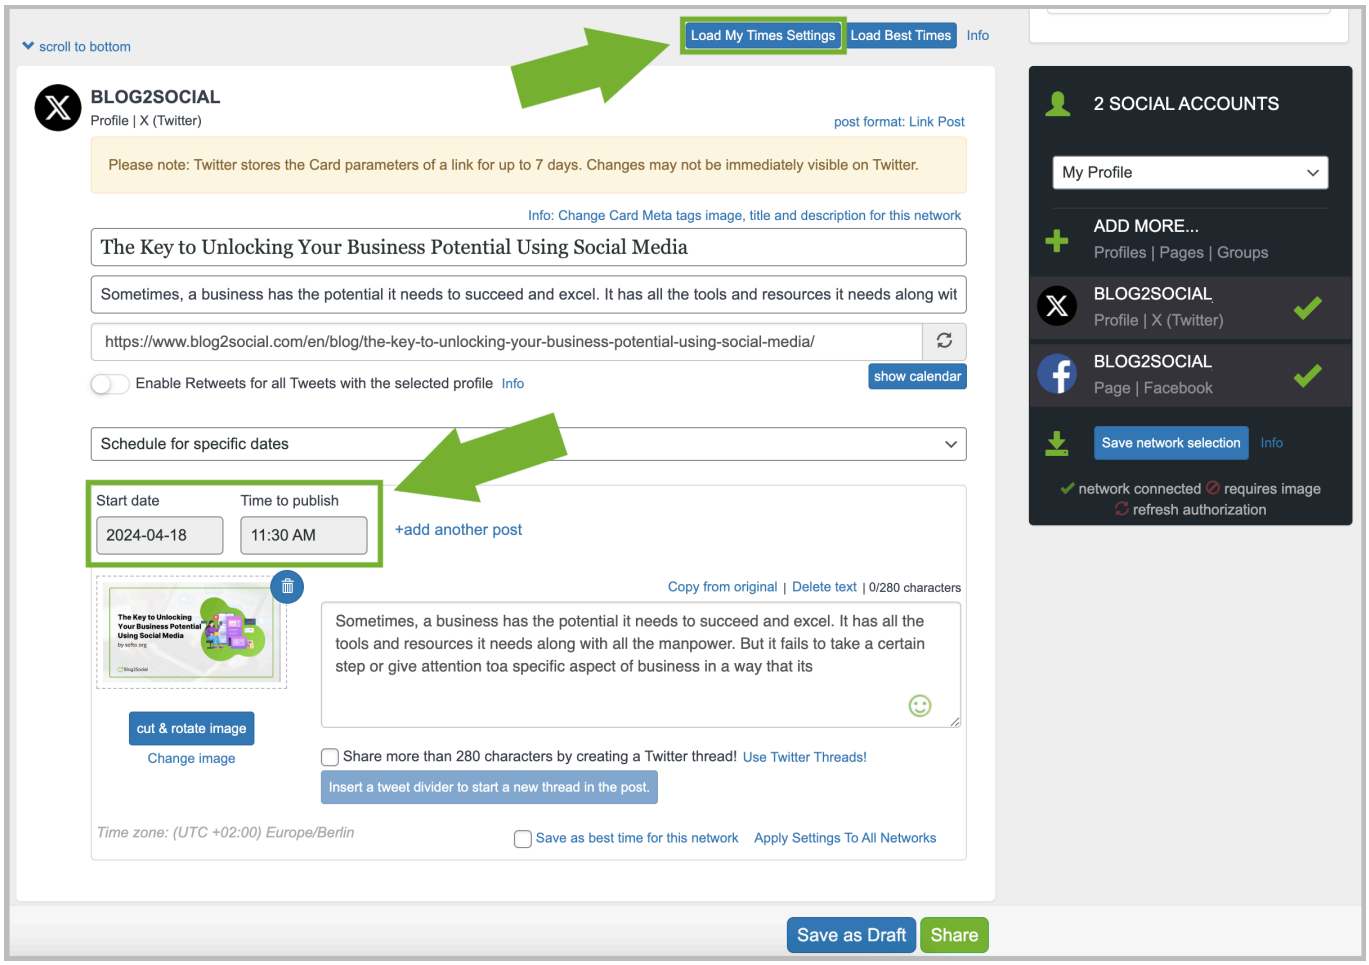
Blog2Social will then apply the settings you previously defined under "Networks" for each connection. The scheduled dates and times will be displayed below each network connection. Finally, just click "Share" to publish your post across your various social media channels.



How to apply the best times for the Auto-Poster

With Blog2Social, you can automatically share and schedule your blog posts by applying the Best Time settings to the Auto-Poster. Simply select "at my best time settings" within the Auto-Poster settings to get started.
