

Scheduling and Best Time Manager

How do I schedule the posting of not yet published blog posts in advance?

If you want to schedule a blog post that you have not yet published, please make sure beforehand, that the blog post is scheduled to be published on WordPress.

To do so, please

1. Go to your post editor and check in the sidebar on the right hand side, whether the post is "Scheduled" or a "Draft".
2. Click on edit and change the date and time according to your editorial scheme and click on "OK" afterwards.
3. Now remember to click the blue "Schedule"-button, to make sure your WordPress has indeed scheduled the post.

Now you can schedule your WordPress post which is not yet published in two ways.

1. Choose to enable the auto-posting so you can decide if the post should be shared immediately after the WordPress post is published on your blog, or if the post should be shared at the best times.

The screenshot shows the 'Social Media Scheduling & Sharing' interface for a Facebook post. At the top, it displays the page name 'BLOG2SOCIAL' and the post format 'Link Post'. The main content area contains the following text: 'There are thousands of smart WordPress marketing plugins to help you with basic tasks. But which are the best and most effective marketing plugins? Are you looking for ways to make your blog or website more successful? Do you want to become more productive and to make your promotional efforts more effective? If you have a WordPress website, marketing plugins can help you to make your life easier. #marketingplugins #tips #WordPress'. Below the text is a featured image titled '21 Best Wordpress Marketing Plugins You Must Have' with a URL: 'https://www.blog2social.com/en/blog/must-have-marketing-plugins-blog/'. The interface includes a 'Share Now' button, a 'Show calendar' button, and a 'Scroll to bottom' link. At the bottom, there are options to 'Schedule for specific dates' and 'Schedule Recurrent Post'.
