Security

Where does Blog2Social save my personal data, passwords and usernames?

We never access or store personal data.The authorizations to get access to the networks APIs are processed as encrypted code. Blog2Social neither stores passwords, nor any personal data. We use the official authentification oAUTH methods to third-party applications provided by the social networks. These methods manage the authentification process on and only hand over a confirmation to Blog2Social.

These confirmations do not contain any personal data or login information. Passwords and personal information will be saved and stored within the social networks only and nowhere else. Blog2Social neither stores passwords and usernames nor any personal data.
